STEPHEN SWEET NAMED REGIONAL ATTORNEY IN NLRB'S MILWAUKEE OFFICE

Fred Feinstein, General Counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, today announced the appointment of Stephen Sweet as Regional Attorney in the agency's regional office in Milwaukee, Wisconsin (Region 30). A career employee, Mr. Sweet had been serving as a Supervising Attorney in that office since 1973. He succeeds Philip E. Bloedorn who was recently appointed to the position of Regional Director.

The NLRB administers and enforces the National Labor Relations Act. It investigates and remedies unfair labor practices and conducts secret-ballot elections to determine whether employees desire union representation. Mr. Sweet will assist Regional Director Bloedorn in supervising NLRB case litigation activities in the eastern two thirds of Wisconsin and the upper peninsula of Michigan.

In making the announcement, General Counsel Feinstein stated:

"Steve Sweet has served the agency in a highly capable manner throughout his career. He has acquired a well deserved reputation as an outstanding attorney and supervisor and brings to this important position a wealth of legal and managerial experience."

A native of Madison, Wisconsin, Mr. Sweet joined the NLRB in 1965 as a trial attorney in the Milwaukee Office. He graduated from the University of Wisconsin with a B.S. degree in Political Science. Mr. Sweet earned a J.D. degree from the University of Wisconsin law school in 1965.

Mr. Sweet and his wife, Rae, a speech pathologist in the Milwaukee Public School system, have two adult sons Mark, an attorney in New Orleans and Brad, a Chicago resident and corporate employee. A big fan of the University of Wisconsin Badgers and the Green Bay Packers, Mr. Sweet's hobbies include fishing, jogging, biking, and reading.
